Quick handling guide

Keep visible

Five habits that protect the dish — and the evidence behind it.

01 Buy from a verified source

Check the supplier and product status before you pay. A company certificate does not automatically cover every product.

02 Record the purchase

Supplier, product, quantity and receipt. Four fields turn an ingredient into a traceable record.

03 Separate raw and cooked

Use a red board for raw meat, blue for seafood, green for produce and white for cooked food. Clean and sanitise between tasks.

04 Store covered, labelled and cold

Raw food on the bottom shelf, cooked food above it. Keep chilled food at 4°C or below and label the date opened.

05 Keep the record current

Run the self-assessment every 90 days and book a programme inspection before the 180-day window closes.

If something is unclear: pause, check the source, and record what you found. An unverified ingredient is not an emergency — an unrecorded one is a risk.

Keep raw meat, poultry and seafood separate from cooked food. Label everything that is opened, cooked or portioned.

Equipment colour guide

One colour per food type. If you only have one board, clean and sanitise between tasks.

RED	Raw meat Board, knife, container	RED
BLU	Seafood Board, knife, tray	BLUE
GRE	Produce Board, knife, colander	GREEN
WHI	Cooked / ready-to-eat Board, knife, serving tray	WHITE

Store cleaning cloths away from food. Wash hands before changing between raw and cooked tasks.
